

USAWC Strategy Conference: Faith in the U.S. Military

USAWC Strategy Conference: Faith in the U.S. Military

How does the role of faith in the U.S. military differ from its role in American society? Is the current exercise of faith in the military appropriate?

Panelists Mikey Weinstein, Military Religious Freedom Foundation; Jay Sekulow, American Center for Law and Justice will discuss this topic as part of the USAWC Strategy

Conference April 5-7.

This is just one of the panels that will be held during the conference, designed to address the role of the military, the potential divergence of military professional values from those of the society from which it derives, the challenges America faces in providing qualified new entrants into the military profession, and the reintegration of departing members of the profession back into larger society.

Guest speakers include Greg Mortenson, author of “Three Cups of Tea,” and Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, TRADOC commander. The conference co-directors, Dr. Lenny Wong and Prof. Trey Braun of the Strategic Studies Institute, will lead a group of distinguished scholars in examining this timely and relevant subject.

Visit <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/conf>, to register, view the agenda, and find other administrative information