

As new homes go up, old ones come down

Thomas Zimmerman, Army War College Public Affairs Office

As new homes go up, old ones come down

The 24 new homes on Marshall Road are now complete are being occupied by U.S. Army War College families. Photo by Thomas Zimmerman.

Oct. 2, 2008 -- Progress is apparent on Marshall Road as the first phase of construction has been completed and the new homes are being occupied by U.S. Army War College families.

The new development boasts 12 new duplex units, 24 homes total, and families began the pilgrimage from the old red homes to the new homes earlier this month.

Now that all of the residents are out of the older homes, phase two of the project will soon commence. The existing red homes will be fenced off and demolished.

The existing homes on Marshall Road are being prepared for demolition to make room for 22 new homes as part of the second phase of the project. Photo by Thomas Zimmerman.

"In this area we're going to construct 22 single family homes and six duplex units, 12 homes,"

Ty McPhillips, the project director for Balfour Beatty Communities, Carlisle Barracks partner under the Residential Communities Initiative. Construction will start near Quarters One and will progress down the road towards the bowling center. These homes will also be for permanent party personnel.

The project is scheduled to be completed in the summer of 2009.

U.S. Army War College Archives - News Article - 02 October 2008