Dec. 8, 2008 -- For the second time, the spirit of competition in the Army versus Navy football game has been brought home to the U.S. Army War College with a friendly game of flag football among the students.

The teams squared off in a seven-on-seven match up on Indian Field Dec. 5, a day before the actual Army and Navy teams would play in Philadelphia.

"The game is about much more than just the sport," said Col. Jody Petery, student. "It's about pride in your service."

The idea for the local game started last year with the Carlisle Barracks sports staff, explained Jim Price. Many students were enthusiastic about being involved in the game, and many more were out showing their support.

After a lively game, the Army team came out on top, 26-14.

"We had a great turn out, and everyone enjoyed themselves tremendously," said Price. The sports staff plans on making this game an annual event.
