

Carlisle Barracks celebrates the military family

By Public Affairs Staff 06 November 2018

Military Family Appreciation Month is observed in November to recognize and honor families of service members from all branches for their unique contributions and sacrifices. The Army recognizes that the selfless dedication and commitment of Army families directly contributes to the readiness of our Soldiers. Families are the force behind the force.

Since the nation's fight for independence, when families became "camp followers" and directly supported Soldiers with food, clothing and medical support, Families have always been a vital part of the Army's ability to stand strong. Military families have never wavered in their support and patriotism, and the Army remains committed to providing them the support and services they need to remain resilient and steadfast in their support to our war fighters.

The Army is fully committed to helping families remain Army strong by offering a variety of programs and services through the garrison MWR programs, Army Community Services and Child Youth and School Services. These programs keep the Army's commitment to provide Soldiers and their families a quality of life commensurate with their service resulting in families feeling important, supported and connected to the Army and the nation

At Carlisle Barracks there are activities plan for our military families this month:

8 Nov – Communicate Effectively w/Children and Youth. Bradley Auditorium, Upton Hall 10 a.m.

The presentation focuses on helping parents communicate effectively with their children. Topics include the benefits of effective communication, typical developmental issues for various age groups, ways to help children process their feelings, basic principles of effective parent/child communication, how to communicate during conflict, and tips for discussing deployment with children.
