

CDC Olympics showcase next generation of athletic champions

By Thomas Zimmerman 02 May 2018

36 children took part in the CDC Olympics, part of the Month of the Military Child.

The children also took part in an obstacle course.

A "javelin throw" was one of the six events held.

About a week before the Army War College takes to the field as part of Jim Thorpe Sports Days, children at the Moore Child Development Center showed them how it was done during the annual "CDC Olympics," April 27.

For one hour, the pre-school and pre-kindergarten children competed in six individual events including 20 yard dash, long jump, javelin throw, and various obstacle courses. Held in conjunction with the Month of the Military Child, 36 children took part with each child received a participation certificate.
