

Dr. Carol V. Evans became the Director of the Strategic Studies Institute and the USAWC Press at the US Army War College in May of 2020. Before becoming the Director of SSI she was a research professor of national security at the War College. Prior to joining the US Army War College, Dr. Evans was a Senior Program Manager, National Security Global Business Division, with Battelle Memorial Institute

Dr. Evans brings 30 years of expertise in the areas of mission assurance, asymmetric warfare, terrorism, maritime security, and homeland security. With that expertise, she has served as an Advisor to the Director of Central Intelligence; a Technical Advisor to the National Ground Intelligence Center, Department of the Army; and an Advisor to the Defense Science Board, Office of the Secretary of Defense.

Dr. Evans began her career in academe in the field of international political economy, having held a variety of faculty and research positions, including positions at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service; the University of California, Berkeley; Harvard University; Washington University, St. Louis; and the Brookings Institution. She holds a Master of Science (MSc) degree and a Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) degree from the London School of Economic