New CDC playground on track for Sept. 30 opening

The anticipation is building for both the staff and children at the Moore Child Development Center as work nears a close on a new, eco-friendly playground.

The long wait for both parents, staff and kids at the Moore Child Development Center is almost over as new, environmentally friendly playground is set to be complete Sept. 30.

Located between the CDC and the McConnell Youth Center, the project began a few weeks ago to replace the old playground equipment. The new equipment include sand boxes, swing sets, bicycle paths, water tables, chime panels, play stages, planter boxes and painting panels and more. The infant playground will also have its own age appropriate swings, playhouse and chime panel.

Lifecycle Construction Company is leading the renovation, with local subcontractor, J W GLEIM Construction demolishing and resurfacing the playground. The equipment is coming from Play Mart, a company that specializes in manufacturing environmentally friendly material. The CDC is receiving a playset named “Brazil,” which took 14,202 milk jugs to manufacture.
