

War College speakers program offers expertise, diverse viewpoints

War College speakers program offers expertise, diverse viewpoints

Did you know that the Army War College has one of the largest and most diverse speakers bureau programs in Central Pa, placing nearly 300 speakers each year at events all over the region to include civic organization events, college and high school classrooms, ceremonies and more?

What makes us unique is that the Army War College student body includes senior military officers of the Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force and Coast Guard, foreign officers, and senior civilian managers of federal agencies such as the Department of Defense and Department of the Army. Each speaker brings a unique and graduate level perspective to the table, with the ability to enhance the discussions of topical issues with their experience gained through their military and government careers.

- Speakers in the past have spoken on topics like:
- Integrity and ethics in leader decision-making
- Role of the military in the homeland
- Leading organizations
- Cyber security
- Leadership: Continuity vs Change
- Current Operations and status of the force

In addition, the speakers are able to share lessons learned from the expansive Army War College curriculum that focuses on strategic leadership and management, international relations and regional studies and contemporary military issues.

If you are interested in requesting a speaker for this academic year -- between now and the end of May -- visit <http://www.carlisle.army.mil/speakers.htm>