Commandant meets garrison employees in support of Military, Families

August 3, 2010 -- Employees introduced the scope of the Military and Family support services at Carlisle Barracks to Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin, newly-arrived USAWC Commandant and Commanding General of Carlisle Barracks. Visits to the Moore Child Development Center, Youth Services Summer Camp, and the post emergency services operations became opportunities to meet both employees and the people they serve.

Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin, Army War College commandant, 'high-fives' a pre-school student at the Moore Child Development Center. Martin visited the CDC as he becomes acquainted with the multiple services and programs of the Army Garrison at Carlisle Barracks.

Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin talks with children participating in the School Age Services Summer Camp while visiting the post's Child and Youth Services programs.

DA Police Officer Alf Alexis demonstrates the business of safeguarding the employees and residents of Carlisle Barracks during Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin's visit with the Emergency Services staff: gate guards, DA police, and firefighters.

Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin and Bob Suskie, Director of Emergency Services, talk during a tour of the post fire station.
