

Carlisle Barracks lights up the holidays

Staff Sgt. Corey Baltos, USAWC Public Affairs

Carlisle Barracks lights up the holidays

The Carlisle Barracks holiday tree.

The Carlisle Barracks community officially kicked off the holiday season with the lighting of the post holiday tree on Dec. 2.

“The Christmas tree is universally regarded as a symbol,” said Lt. Col. Janet Holliday, garrison commander. “However for those of us at Carlisle Barracks the tree is a symbol of community.”

Maj. Gen. Gregg Martin, USAWC Commandant echoed Holliday’s remarks about community.

“The holidays remind me of the ‘five fs’,” said Martin. “Faith, family, fitness, friends and a whole lot of fun. The holiday season gives us a chance to celebrate together and give thanks for our blessings.”

After the tree was lit, the assembled crowd sang carols, visited with Santa and Mrs. Claus, and took carriage rides around the post.

Megan Arnold visits with Santa Claus following the tree lighting ceremony.

U.S. Army War College Archives - News Article -
03 December 2010