USAWC Strategy Conference: Roles of the Military and Society: Reciprocal Expectations?

As a steward of society, what is the proper role of the U.S. military? Should it be limited to fighting wars or expanded into other areas such as border security, diplomacy, or humanitarian missions?

Panelists Lt. Gen. John Mulholland, Special Operations Command; Dr. Douglas Stuart, Dickinson College; Dr. Diana Putman, U.S. Agency for International Development; Dr. Nadia Schadlow, Smith Richardson Foundation and moderator Prof. Douglas Lovelace will discuss these questions and more during the 2011 USAWC Strategy Conference.

Lt. Gen. John E. Sterling Jr, Deputy Commanding General/Chief of Staff, TRADOC, will close the conference with his insights about the Army-wide initiative to refine the understanding of what it means to be in the Profession of Arms.

Key topics of the conference will be --

- o America's society and the military profession
- o the media perspective on the military and society
- o the role of faith in the US military and in American society
- o the roles of Military families, spanning the military community and the American society
- o Military leaders call for investing in America's youth
- o Physical, mental, economic impacts of veterans re-integrating into our American society
- o Expectations: do Americans look to the US military for more than fighting wars ... border security, diplomacy, humanitarian mission?
