Carlisle Barracks Soldiers give back to community

During the past few weeks the Soldiers of Carlisle Barracks “paid it forward” by participating in two project aimed at keeping the Carlisle community clean and safe.

On Aug. 15, 10 Soldiers, including Lt. Col. Greg Ank, garrison commander and Command Sgt. Maj. Nelson Maldonado, installation CSM, took part in an adopt-a-highway project along Route 11 in Carlisle. The group picked up trash and other debris along the road in an effort to make the area safe for travel and children.

On Aug. 28, alongside students from Dickinson College, several officers from Carlisle Barracks participated in a community cleanup project to reduce the amount of trash and dead trees along the LeTort Spring.

“Several residents of this neighborhood came out to express their gratitude of the project which has helped reduce the number of gangs and drug dealers that have plagued the area for many years,” said Capt. Shavayey Cato, HHD Commander.
