

A lasting tribute to a 'remarkable USAWC professor'

Suzanne Reynolds, Public Affairs

A lasting tribute to a 'remarkable USAWC professor'

Dr. Sara Morgan's family stand in front of her portrait in the newly unveiled "Sara Morgan Room," DCLM, Mar. 21. Photos by Scott Finger

March 21, 2012 -- In the last four years of her life, Dr. Sara L. Morgan served with distinction as the Senior Civilian Advisor to the Commandant and Professor of Human Resource Management here at the Army War College.

Dr. Sara Morgan was honored for her important work with USAWC students and her prominent role in the Army War College at a dedication of the "Sara Morgan Room," a conference room in the Department of Command, Leadership and Management, March 21. Many of Dr. Morgan's mementos and awards from her service at the Army War College and earlier positions with the Army were displayed for her family, friends and colleagues in the Army War College community.

"This was totally unexpected," said Larry Morgan about the demonstration of respect for his late wife. "This is a great honor to what she achieved here.

"She set a high mark for excellence," said Morgan.

Among her many accomplishments here, Dr. Morgan established a comprehensive civilian education development program highlighted by an orientation program for senior civilian students, activities to build cohesion within the civilian student cohort, and career counseling for graduating students.

"She has left a gaping hole in our department and our hearts," said Col. Michael Chesney, chairman of the Department of Command, Leadership and Management.

USAWC staff members view Dr. Sara Morgan's mementos and awards displayed in the room.

Retired Col. Ed Filiberti, DCLM faculty, shared an office with Dr. Morgan for four years.

"I was Sara's officemate for almost four years and ... I still miss her," said Filiberti. "I saw firsthand her selfless dedication to developing both her seminar and all the civilian students, everyday. She was totally committed to them," he said.

"It is a fitting tribute, and I know she would be so proud and humbled by the room and ceremony," said Filiberti.

The USAWC Class of 2011 was the last class mentored by Dr. Morgan. Col. Scott King, 2011 class president, represented his fellow students at the dedication event.

"This is a great tribute to a great lady," said King.

U.S. Army War College Archives - News Article - 28 March 2012