

10 Years Later -- Ask the Panel about the Iraq War and war reporting

Army War College Fellow at Harvard joins journalists to discuss war reporting on BBC's The World radio program.

Ask the panelists your question on the blog.

Ten years ago next month, the American-led invasion of Iraq toppled the dictatorship of Saddam Hussein. The war and the men and women who fought it were chronicled by journalists embedded with the troops.

On Friday, March 15, from 7 to 9 p.m., The World's Aaron Schachter will moderate a distinguished panel of journalists who reported from the front lines — including journalists Sebastian Junger and Bob Woodruff, photojournalist Rita Leistner, and US Army Col. Richard “Ross” Coffman — as they discuss and debate the role of journalists in war reporting.

Do you have a question for the panel? Leave your question at <http://www.theworld.org/2013/03/embedded/> ... or tweet it using the hashtag #Embedded.

Journalists Sebastian Junger and Bob Woodruff, photojournalist Rita Leistner, and US Army Colonel Richard "Ross" Coffman.