Guest lecturer, Commandant's Lecture Series, shared thoughts on the Army's budgetary 'way ahead'

Guest lecturer shared his thoughts on the Army's budgetary 'way ahead' and subsequent future effect on the service's ability to resource, project, employ and sustain landpower on Jan. 9 at the Commandant's Lecture Series in Bliss Hall.

Lt. Gen. Joseph Martz, Military Deputy for Budget to the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Financial Management and Comptroller, is responsible for accountability and execution of the current fiscal year Army budget.

Prior to this position Martz was the Director of Program Analysis and Evaluation in the Army G8.

Martz is a 1998 graduate of the National War College and a 1979 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy.

The CLS lectures present prominent speakers who represent diverse backgrounds, expertise, and varied perspectives and directly support in-depth exploration of a special theme. The theme for this academic year is "Landpower and the Balance of Joint Capabilities for 21st Century Challenges."
