

Army Intel chief guides Army War College students' thinking about operational intelligence

Army Intel chief guides Army War College students' thinking about operational intelligence

Lt. Gen. Mary Legere, Army Deputy Chief of Staff, G2, spoke with the full student body Jan. 8 about Intelligence and Protection.

Legere spoke as the 2015 Francis W. Deserio lecturer; the Deserio lecture is designed to enhance students' understanding of the critical role of intelligence in the development of strategy policy.

Her presentation supported the students' current course, Theater Strategy and Campaigning, and its focused lesson on the joint intelligence and protection functions. As an additional benefit, she engaged directly with students and faculty of the intelligence community during a working lunch.

U.S. Army War College Archives - News Article - 09 January 2015