

FLAGS graduates are ready to lead

Erin O. Stattel, Army War College Public Affairs Office

FLAGS graduates are ready to lead

(Dec. 15, 2009)--As many as 14 spouses participated in and completed the FLAGS facilitator training, culminating in a graduation ceremony held Dec. 15 at the Letort View Community Center.

FLAGS, or the facilitating leadership and group skills workshop, is a five-day, experience-based, strategic leadership seminar for spouses and develops skills that are applicable to all aspects of life.

Led by program facilitator Lisa Towery, the group successfully completed facilitator training, which began in October, and is preparing for the two five-day sessions to be held in January and February. Photo by Megan Clugh.

"This workshop provides these spouses with the skills to become strategic thinkers," Towery said. "And the skills they take away are not limited to military life, but are applicable to all aspects of life."

Spouses interested in signing up for the sessions should contact Joe York, director of military family programming at 245-4787.