

NWS issues Winter Storm Warning

National Weather Service issues a Winter Storm Warning

Dec. 18, 2009 -- The national weather service in state college has issued a winter storm warning for snow which is in effect from 4 am Saturday to 7 am Sunday.

Remember, for post closures or delay information call the operations line at 245-3700.

Snow will overspread portions of the Susquehanna River valley early Saturday morning. Snow could become heavy at times around daybreak Saturday and continue through Saturday evening before tapering off early Sunday morning.

Snowfall totals between 6 and 8 inches are likely...with locally higher amounts. Snow could fall heavy at times and combine with northeasterly wind gusts between 15 and 25 mph, creating blowing and drifting snow.

This could at times reduce visibilities to near zero creating dangerous travel conditions Saturday.

If you must travel...keep an extra flashlight...food...blanket and a cellular phone in your vehicle in case of an emergency.

Additional details can also be found at www.weather.gov/statecollege.