

Community Connections -- News in your town

Suzanne Reynolds, Army War College Public Affairs Office

Community Connections -- What's going on in your community

New Air Monitor to benefit the Carlisle Community

A new EPA-certified air monitor called a Met One BAM-1020 will be placed on top of the Sentinel building by Jan. 1 to provide air pollution data in real-time.

Pollution levels will be printed in The Sentinel daily, and hour-by-hour updates will be posted on its website, www.cumberlink.com along with information on how to understand the data and other health-related materials.

These updates will alert people with medical conditions, e.g., heart disease and asthma, as to high pollution days.

The new air monitor was purchased through a joint partnership between the Carlisle Regional Medical Center, the Clean Air Board of Central Pa. and The Sentinel.

Carlisle's Own Iron Chef 2008

The Letort View Community Center on Carlisle Barracks will be the site of the 5th annual "Carlisle's Own Iron Chef," Sunday, Nov. 16 from 2 to 6 p.m.

This event is based on the popular TV show. For Carlisle's event, chefs from local restaurants compete for the title. Carlisle Area School District Culinary Arts students will participate as assistants to the chefs.

This event will benefit the Employment Skills Center and their adult education programs. For more information on the Center, visit their website: <http://www.employmentskillscenter.org>

For tickets and information, call 717-243-6040.

New Businesses come to Downtown Carlisle

New businesses ranging from women's apparel and a thrift store to antiques and restaurants have taken up residence in Downtown Carlisle.

Businesses such as Leonna's, History on High-The Shop, and Better Days Animal League Thrift Store have already opened their doors on Hanover Street.

Opening in November on High and Hanover Streets are Best Dressed List, Luigi's Italian Restaurant, The Dancing Skirt, and Tony's Pastry and Bakery.

For more information and map locations, visit the Dickinson College's About Downtown website:
<http://www.dickinson.edu/about/downtown>

For other post and community events be sure to check the Community Calendar