

Post kids' art moves on to national competition

Spc. Jennifer Rick, Army War College Public Affairs Office

Post kids' art moves on to national competition

Georgia Roach, 12, created this pastel piece of artwork that will be judged in the national level 2009 National Fine Arts Exhibit Program.

Photo by Spc. Jennifer Rick.

March 25, 2009 -- Two local children have proven their talent in the art world recently by creating winning artwork in the regional competition of the 2009 National Fine Arts Exhibit Program.

Earlier this year, all the children involved in Youth Services' Art program submitted pieces to be judged in several categories.

The artwork was displayed at Dunham Army Health Clinic. The winning pieces from the local competition were sent to Vermont to be judged in the regional competition.

Georgia Roach, 12, and Jasmine Buckley, 13, created pastel pieces that will be judged at the national level competition in Atlanta, Ga. Their work will be judged against pieces from all over the United States and military bases world-wide. Results of the competition are expected in May.

This piece was created by Jasmine Buckley, 13. Three Youth Services children have placed first in the national competition in the past. Photo by Spc. Jennifer Rick.

Local winners include:

Jasmine Buckley, 13, mixed media, wire sculpture, block print, watercolor

Chandler Zastrow, 12, block print

Victoria Sangrie, 7, sculpture

Morgan Caprish, 7, pastel

Gannon Donnelly, 10, mixed media

Alan Hanks, 12, watercolor

Faith Kallien, 8, mixed media

Claire Mayette, 9, block print

Ally Ruch, 8, watercolor

Cynthia Hall, 11, plaster sculpture

Georgia Roach, 12, pastel

