

Recognition ceremony to honor volunteers

Kelly Schloesser, Army War College Public Affairs Office

Recognition ceremony to honor volunteers

It takes an Army to run Carlisle Barracks - an Army of volunteers. With more than 1,000 volunteers annually, Carlisle Barracks is taking time to give special thanks for all of their hard work at the annual Volunteer Recognition Ceremony at the Letort View Pavilion from 12-2pm on Thursday, May 14. All volunteers and their guest are welcome to attend. Lunch will be provided.

At last year's ceremony, Garrison Commander Lt. Col. Sergio Dickerson, Debbie Teague, Post Memorial Chapel, and Jeff Hanks, Army Community Service held a check totaling $1,870,016.40, the dollar equivalent for more than 106,000 hours of volunteer service from the last year. Photo by Megan Clugh.

The ceremony will thank all volunteers for their continued support and also highlight 18 volunteers for individual recognition, one per organization.

"The volunteers on Carlisle Barracks contribute thousands of hours and this event is our chance to say thank you from the bottom of our hearts," said Jeff Hanks, installation volunteer coordinator.

Lt. Col. Sergio Dickerson, garrison commander, will present individual awards.

"These individuals play a critical role and this is our time to say job well done," said Hanks.

Some of the organizations recognizing the support include:

- Dunham Clinic & Red Cross
- Army Heritage and Education Center
- Retirement Services
- Child Development Center

- Bowling Center
- Chapel
- Tax Office
- Thrift Shop
- Army Community Service

U.S. Army War College Archives - News Article - 08 May 2009