Garrison commanders on Carlisle Barracks provide "city-manager" support for an installation that provides security, safety, and base operations for the mission activities of the Army War College and other organizations, as well as to residents living on post, military retirees, the surrounding military community and a dedicated and professional workforce.

Hannan came to Carlisle from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. where she served as the Deputy Commanding Officer for the 1st Engineer Brigade.

Throughout her career, she served as the Engineer Doctrine Chief, Maneuver Support Center of Excellence, the Deputy District Engineer for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Honolulu District, Hawaii and as a Project Manager for a Formerly Used Defense Site (FUDS). Hannan commanded the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Signal Brigade in Mannheim, Germany, followed by command of the 18th Engineer Brigade Rear Detachment during their deployment in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. Following command, she served as the U.S. Army Engineer School, Operations Officer.

Hannan holds a bachelor's degree in Environmental Engineering from the United States Military Academy, West Point, and a master's degree in Environmental Engineering from Missouri University of Science and Technology. She graduated from the Engineer basic and advanced courses and the Command and General Staff College.

Vincent E. Grewatz, Director, U.S. Army Installation Management Command-Training, officiated the change-of-command ceremony.
