

USAWC students, USAG staff learn more about IMCOM transformation

By Thomas Zimmerman 26 February 2018

Vince Grewatz, ID-T director, came to Carlisle Barracks to speak to Army War College students who may assume positions in IMCOM after graduation and to share updates from his command guidance and priorities now that the directorate has achieved full

Grewatz also met with members of the USAG Carlisle Barracks staff and spent time talking with them and the staff at the LVCC.

Army War College students and garrison staff were able to learn about new programs and initiatives from the IMCOM Installation Directorate-Training during a series of events last week.

Vince Grewatz, ID-T director, came to Carlisle Barracks to speak to Army War College students who may assume positions in IMCOM after graduation and to share updates from his command guidance and priorities now that the directorate has achieved full operational capability. After his noon-time talk, Grewatz met individually with the students to answer questions and learn more about them as they prepare to join IMCOM.

He also met informally with the USAG Carlisle Barracks staff the night before his briefing and received updates on the installations projects and programs.

